“ I represent entrepreneurs, start-up businesses, and established private and public corporations in all aspects of intellectual property and technology litigation, brand protection, and dispute resolution.”

Jim is a member of Howard & Howard’s Intellectual Property Group. For more than 28 years, he has helped businesses protect and leverage their brands through strategic counseling, licensing, and litigation. Jim represents clients in complex disputes before state and federal courts, the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, administrative agencies, and in private arbitration. His experience spans all aspects of intellectual property law, from safeguarding trademarks to resolving high-stakes conflicts, with a focus on practical solutions that align with business goals.
